

Randy Hall

Randy Hall was born in Winnipeg, Manitoba and raised in Thunder Bay, Ontario. He has a BSc. in Geology from Lakehead University and has taken graduate level courses at Queen's University. He joined Imperial Oil upon graduation and spent the first decade of his career working as a mineral exploration geologist throughout northern Canada. In 1989, he joined the recently founded Site Remediation team at Imperial Oil and spent the next seven years managing a wide variety environmental remediation and reclamation projects at former service stations, bulk fuel storage facilities and refineries throughout Canada. In 1996, he became the national manager of design, construction and remediation of fuels marketing sites throughout Canada. In 2005, the remediation services organization was split off into its own specialized work group and he was appointed Fuels Marketing Asset manager, with national responsibilities for real estate acquisition and divestment, network planning, maintenance and repair, design and construction for Imperial Oil fuels marketing.
